

FOR THE HANDSOMER MAN.

THE WOMEN OF WINDSOR TERRACE CAST THEIR VOTES.

Mr. Donovan's Lieutenants were Good-looking, suave, and polite, and they had the most beautiful carriage in the city.

It is probable that the women of Windsor Terrace can't vote, but they can be seen at the polls as well as their husbands or brothers, but when it comes to voting for School Trustees they can't vote.

The women of Windsor Terrace were not at all deterred by the fact that they were not allowed to vote. They voted for the Democratic candidate because they thought that he was "nicer" than his rival, and when the polls were closed and they had won they declared it had been more fun than a picnic.

It was their election all through. Three-fourths of the 500 votes polled were cast by women. They were determined voters, and although half a dozen of them were challenged, they won in their votes and walked out with a wouldn't-like-to-pull-your-hair-glances at the challenger.

These tactics worked, and after the first few challenges had been made, the women of Windsor Terrace were not interrupted. There were a few of them who supported the Republican candidate.

From 12 o'clock, when the polls opened, until they were closed at 4, the carriages of the rival candidates skirmished through the district and collected voters, from the woman who was scribbling the list of names to the mistress of the house and her daughters, who were sitting in the front piazza.

Windermere, the house which has been in the hands of a family for generations, and it is the largest vote. Notwithstanding the fact that the women of Windsor Terrace are not allowed to vote, they are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this.

There was no time to do any canvassing in the forenoon. The ballots headed by Albert Donovan and D. H. Hamilton, and containing on each side the names of the candidates for the Board of Education, were printed and distributed.

At 12 o'clock the Windsor Hotel manager, Mr. Donovan's campaign, he is a good-looking young man, with dark curly hair and a winning smile, and his work was very effective.

For each woman he had a winning smile and a Donovan ballot. Mr. Duffy is also a practical politician. He gave the driver a lot of ballots, and sent him off to bring the carriages to the polls. Most of the carriages were sent through the district on the same errand.

The women of Windsor Terrace were not deterred by the fact that they were not allowed to vote. They voted for the Democratic candidate because they thought that he was "nicer" than his rival, and when the polls were closed and they had won they declared it had been more fun than a picnic.

It was their election all through. Three-fourths of the 500 votes polled were cast by women. They were determined voters, and although half a dozen of them were challenged, they won in their votes and walked out with a wouldn't-like-to-pull-your-hair-glances at the challenger.

These tactics worked, and after the first few challenges had been made, the women of Windsor Terrace were not interrupted. There were a few of them who supported the Republican candidate.

From 12 o'clock, when the polls opened, until they were closed at 4, the carriages of the rival candidates skirmished through the district and collected voters, from the woman who was scribbling the list of names to the mistress of the house and her daughters, who were sitting in the front piazza.

Windermere, the house which has been in the hands of a family for generations, and it is the largest vote. Notwithstanding the fact that the women of Windsor Terrace are not allowed to vote, they are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this.

There was no time to do any canvassing in the forenoon. The ballots headed by Albert Donovan and D. H. Hamilton, and containing on each side the names of the candidates for the Board of Education, were printed and distributed.

At 12 o'clock the Windsor Hotel manager, Mr. Donovan's campaign, he is a good-looking young man, with dark curly hair and a winning smile, and his work was very effective.

For each woman he had a winning smile and a Donovan ballot. Mr. Duffy is also a practical politician. He gave the driver a lot of ballots, and sent him off to bring the carriages to the polls. Most of the carriages were sent through the district on the same errand.

The women of Windsor Terrace were not deterred by the fact that they were not allowed to vote. They voted for the Democratic candidate because they thought that he was "nicer" than his rival, and when the polls were closed and they had won they declared it had been more fun than a picnic.

It was their election all through. Three-fourths of the 500 votes polled were cast by women. They were determined voters, and although half a dozen of them were challenged, they won in their votes and walked out with a wouldn't-like-to-pull-your-hair-glances at the challenger.

These tactics worked, and after the first few challenges had been made, the women of Windsor Terrace were not interrupted. There were a few of them who supported the Republican candidate.

From 12 o'clock, when the polls opened, until they were closed at 4, the carriages of the rival candidates skirmished through the district and collected voters, from the woman who was scribbling the list of names to the mistress of the house and her daughters, who were sitting in the front piazza.

Windermere, the house which has been in the hands of a family for generations, and it is the largest vote. Notwithstanding the fact that the women of Windsor Terrace are not allowed to vote, they are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this.

There was no time to do any canvassing in the forenoon. The ballots headed by Albert Donovan and D. H. Hamilton, and containing on each side the names of the candidates for the Board of Education, were printed and distributed.

At 12 o'clock the Windsor Hotel manager, Mr. Donovan's campaign, he is a good-looking young man, with dark curly hair and a winning smile, and his work was very effective.

For each woman he had a winning smile and a Donovan ballot. Mr. Duffy is also a practical politician. He gave the driver a lot of ballots, and sent him off to bring the carriages to the polls. Most of the carriages were sent through the district on the same errand.

The women of Windsor Terrace were not deterred by the fact that they were not allowed to vote. They voted for the Democratic candidate because they thought that he was "nicer" than his rival, and when the polls were closed and they had won they declared it had been more fun than a picnic.

It was their election all through. Three-fourths of the 500 votes polled were cast by women. They were determined voters, and although half a dozen of them were challenged, they won in their votes and walked out with a wouldn't-like-to-pull-your-hair-glances at the challenger.

These tactics worked, and after the first few challenges had been made, the women of Windsor Terrace were not interrupted. There were a few of them who supported the Republican candidate.

From 12 o'clock, when the polls opened, until they were closed at 4, the carriages of the rival candidates skirmished through the district and collected voters, from the woman who was scribbling the list of names to the mistress of the house and her daughters, who were sitting in the front piazza.

Windermere, the house which has been in the hands of a family for generations, and it is the largest vote. Notwithstanding the fact that the women of Windsor Terrace are not allowed to vote, they are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this.

There was no time to do any canvassing in the forenoon. The ballots headed by Albert Donovan and D. H. Hamilton, and containing on each side the names of the candidates for the Board of Education, were printed and distributed.

At 12 o'clock the Windsor Hotel manager, Mr. Donovan's campaign, he is a good-looking young man, with dark curly hair and a winning smile, and his work was very effective.

For each woman he had a winning smile and a Donovan ballot. Mr. Duffy is also a practical politician. He gave the driver a lot of ballots, and sent him off to bring the carriages to the polls. Most of the carriages were sent through the district on the same errand.

The women of Windsor Terrace were not deterred by the fact that they were not allowed to vote. They voted for the Democratic candidate because they thought that he was "nicer" than his rival, and when the polls were closed and they had won they declared it had been more fun than a picnic.

It was their election all through. Three-fourths of the 500 votes polled were cast by women. They were determined voters, and although half a dozen of them were challenged, they won in their votes and walked out with a wouldn't-like-to-pull-your-hair-glances at the challenger.

These tactics worked, and after the first few challenges had been made, the women of Windsor Terrace were not interrupted. There were a few of them who supported the Republican candidate.

From 12 o'clock, when the polls opened, until they were closed at 4, the carriages of the rival candidates skirmished through the district and collected voters, from the woman who was scribbling the list of names to the mistress of the house and her daughters, who were sitting in the front piazza.

Windermere, the house which has been in the hands of a family for generations, and it is the largest vote. Notwithstanding the fact that the women of Windsor Terrace are not allowed to vote, they are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this. They are not deterred by this.

There was no time to do any canvassing in the forenoon. The ballots headed by Albert Donovan and D. H. Hamilton, and containing on each side the names of the candidates for the Board of Education, were printed and distributed.

At 12 o'clock the Windsor Hotel manager, Mr. Donovan's campaign, he is a good-looking young man, with dark curly hair and a winning smile, and his work was very effective.

For each woman he had a winning smile and a Donovan ballot. Mr. Duffy is also a practical politician. He gave the driver a lot of ballots, and sent him off to bring the carriages to the polls. Most of the carriages were sent through the district on the same errand.

The women of Windsor Terrace were not deterred by the fact that they were not allowed to vote. They voted for the Democratic candidate because they thought that he was "nicer" than his rival, and when the polls were closed and they had won they declared it had been more fun than a picnic.

It was their election all through. Three-fourths of the 500 votes polled were cast by women. They were determined voters, and although half a dozen of them were challenged, they won in their votes and walked out with a wouldn't-like-to-pull-your-hair-glances at the challenger.

IT LOOKS LIKE HARMONY.

PERHAPS MR. REID AND MR. PLATT WILL FIX THINGS UP TO-MORROW.

Senator Hisecock hears that an interview has been arranged for Chairman Carter, working the Chaudron Parties-Cor. Hisecock's Committee is the College and the House.

A great flag was thrown from the roof of the Republican National Headquarters, at 518 Fifth Avenue, yesterday. Out of a second-story window there is a banner telling what the House is for, with a wheat and a sheaf of wheat, and a banner with a sheaf of wheat and a banner with a sheaf of wheat.

"Protection and Reciprocity" emblazoned on the scroll. Col. H. L. Swords, the Secretary of the House, is the great man of the place. He is genial and accommodating and treats all callers as if they were the greatest statesman on earth.

Chairman Carter's room is on the second story, in front. Mr. Carter was unable yesterday to gather around him enough of the Executive Committee to hold a meeting. Gen. Clarkson was on hand, and so was Cornelius N. Bliss (with an eye on the two safes), but Mr. Fassenden and Mr. Manley and the others failed to come to time and furnish the quorum which Mr. Carter desired.

Mr. Carter passed the day discussing the situation with Mr. Reid. He was particularly polite to the owners of small newspapers, the organizers of clam chowder parties, and the representatives of east side Republican clubs about to give moonlight picnics for Harrison and Hill.

Senator Fassett and Whitelaw Reid were the distinguished visitors at headquarters. Mr. Reid, who is in New York State, is in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. He saw Mr. Fassett and Warner Miller in earnest conversation and then he went to his room.

Mr. Hisecock learned that Whitelaw Reid is to consult to-morrow with ex-Senator Platt on the Republican situation in New York State. Mr. Hisecock also learned that William A. Sullivan, the New York member of the Executive Committee, had arranged to see ex-Senator Platt at the Oriental Hotel, Conny Island.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

He understood that Mr. Fassett would not be in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two. He was in the city for a day or two.

Mr. Hisecock was thereupon convinced that the House, which was in full harmony with the Senate, was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate. He was in full harmony with the Senate.

THE MOVEMENT AGAINST TAMMANY.

A Want of Harmony in the Committee that is Expected to be Organized.

The committee of ten county Democrats that was appointed to consider the question of building up anti-Tammany organizations in all of the districts where none exist at present, did not hold its expected meeting yesterday.

The reason was that word came from some of the big Democrats who are quietly helping to work along that nothing further should be done until after the meeting of the State committee to-morrow night. One of the members of the committee said:

The gentlemen who have been prominent in assisting to reorganize and rehabilitate the County Democracy, have been meeting in accord with the views, purposes, and suggestions of the State committee in New York City and New York State opposed to Tammany.

"It is in deference to their wishes that we desire to postpone further action until after the meeting of the State Committee."

The Committee of Ten is not working harmoniously together, and this word was not given to the committee by the State committee. The committee of ten members appeared at the State meeting in the Cooper Union yesterday afternoon, but they did not hold their meeting.

The committee is divided into two factions, known as the "Olds," who are anxious for a change, and the "New," who are anxious to keep the old organization. The "Olds" are anxious for a change, and the "New" are anxious to keep the old organization.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

James E. Conner, Charles A. Jackson, the chairman of the State committee, and the chairman of the anti-Tammany committee, William F. Grote, and Leon Cohen.

WAS THE POPE RECEIVED?

A STATEMENT ABOUT THE FAIRBAULT AND STILLWATER DISPUTE.

It is said to have been inspired by the Vatican—Was Archbishop Corrigan Disrespectful to His Holiness in His Letter?

LONDON, Aug. 3.—A despatch received here from Rome this evening contains a remarkable statement as to the attitude of Archbishop Corrigan toward Archbishop Ireland, and, incidentally, the Pope in the Fairbault and Stillwater dispute.

The statement was given out by a high authority of the Vatican, the despatch says, and it is as follows:

Considerable surprise has been caused here by an effort of Archbishop Corrigan of New York to establish the inexactness of one of the statements of the Pope in his recent letter to the Bishops of the province of New York.

After the consecration of Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, the Archbishop of New York addressed a letter to the Pope, signed by himself and some of his suffragans, saying that it had come to their knowledge that a threat had been made to the Pope that a eulogium would be pronounced in America if the Pope ventured to condemn the arrangements lately made by Archbishop Ireland for the schools situated in Fairbault and Stillwater, Minn.

In his reply the Pope stated distinctly that nobody ever made him such a threat. Upon receipt of this letter the Archbishop of New York collected a number of quotations from the memorial of the Archbishop of Brooklyn, the letter of the Archbishop of Baltimore, that seemed to show a different sense, and forwarded them to the Pope. The Pope, however, was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived. The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was not so easily deceived.

The Pope's reply was not so easily deceived, and he showed by his reply that he was